Dear Superman;

I'm so happy that you accepted my offer to meet up to discuss the colour combinations of the new shield I am proposing. I did however want to meet you in person so that we could both look at pantone colours swatches together. Phone calls are so impersonal and so much can be misconstrued. For example, when talking about blue you might have 'Periwinkle' in mind while I have 'Persian blue' in mind. It is much better in person don't you think?

For the most part I am open to most colours but brown and pink, they clash with my white hair. I don't think I would want to wear a white or pastel blue shirt either because then Mr. Freeze will be upset.

I realize you are at the other end of the county but you do travel at the speed of light so it should be no problem getting here. Shall we say Monday, Jan 30, at 6:00pm? We can meet at my statue at Vancouver City Hall.

Looking forward to your response! House Ahoy!!!!

Yours Truly,

The signature 'Captain Vancouver' is written in a highly decorative, blackletter-style font. The letters are thick and feature elaborate, swirling flourishes and serifs, particularly around the 'C' and 'V'. The overall appearance is that of a formal, historical, or perhaps 'superheroic' signature.
